Readiness for Online Learning

Welcome to Canisius College!

This site was developed to help you get ready with learning online. Online learning can take place in many ways. Instructors may choose to teach a hybrid, blended, or fully online course. No matter which type of class your instructors choose to teach, this site is sure to help you get started with online learning.

It is important that you are not only prepared to learn in our learning management system, but also possess the pre-requisite skills for learning online. Time-management skills, good written communication skills, and computer and technology skills are all necessary when learning online. Online courses allow for flexibility, but they are just as rigorous as a face-to-face course. Online courses may have synchronous components that you will have to fit into your schedule and deadlines that you do have to meet. Canisius College online courses are not self-paced, but reflect our commitment to quality and value by being actively facilitated by your instructor.
