Canisius College is dedicated to excellence in academics. From time-to-time, emergencies arise where campus resources - classrooms, internet tools, or even the campus itself - are not available. We are committed to continuing to teach and learn nonetheless. If certain internet tools suddenly become unavailable, we can adapt using traditional means, such as face-to-face meetings and paper printing. If the campus or at least some classrooms become unavailable, we have practices developed for high-quality online education, that can help us modify our courses for online teaching and learning.

This web resource helps to ensure that most classes can continue in a time of an emergency.

In the event of an emergency, ITS will make every effort to ensure technology support will continue.